Sofa

An icon of Neoplastic design within the De Stijl movement, the Utrecht™ sofa balances simple geometric shapes and right angles for a comfortable and relaxing experience. Offered with two or three seats, the foam cushions have fabric or leather upholstery with blanket or zig-zag top stitching. The three-seat sofa is curved to encourage interaction. The sofa complements the Utrecht lounge chair.

Details

Gerrit Thomas Rietveld
Gerrit Thomas Rietveld was a Dutch cabinet maker, furniture designer, and architect. He is known for reinventing pieces based on the strict vertical and horizontal geometry of the De Stijl movement, which gave rise to Neoplasticism. Favoring simple construction and primary colors, Rietveld's iconic designs continue to influence modern architecture and furniture design.
