Creating Places for Expertise

Expertise Fosters Trust

Haworth works with professional services firms to create spaces where strategic client partnerships and seamless experiences are shaped by environments that support outcomes, long-term relationships, and performance. With decades of experience, we solve for what's next with spaces that empower people to thrive, connect, and do their best work.

Through our research and partnership with designers and customers, our goal is to help future-proof firms—aligning both people and space for optimal performance while elevating your firm's brand. We collaborate to bring clients the power of design for elevated human performance through a portfolio of solutions that support the whole person.

Artificial intelligence, automation, and analytics are redefining what's possible—freeing up talent to focus on the responsibility of serving as trusted advisers and reliable problem-solvers.

With increasing access to global talent, the competition is fierce. As firms reimagine the right mix of people and space, recruiting and retaining the right talent remains a priority.

Reputation is everything. Employees and clients are increasingly seeking out firms that align with their values, choosing those that create broader impact beyond profits. Firms that invest in spaces that support dynamic work practices, professional growth, collaboration, and culture will continue to differentiate themselves in the market and excel.

The Well-Being of Talent Matters

Legal Offices

Raising the Bar on First Impressions

Research shows the main criteria for choosing a legal firm are a combination of experience, trust, and communication. Brands are a reflection of that combination, embodied by people and the physical environment. Well-designed public and private spaces that demonstrate what firms value draw people in and inspire confidence. Inviting spaces not only help people feel welcome, they also set the tone for the entire client and staff experience.

Inspiring Spaces for Counsel

Along with legal expertise, clients expect counsel to integrate legal thinking with strategic insight. Those expectations create a duality of work requiring private spaces for focused case work, along with dynamic ancillary spaces that encourage collaboration, team strategy, and mentorship.

Technology Redefines Tradition

AI-driven research, contract analysis, document automation, and even virtual court appearances are accelerating workflows and reshaping billing models. Human judgment with machine precision will continue to be foundational for security, efficiency, and client communications. Thoughtfully designed spaces that integrate technology intuitively take into account seamless connectivity and adaptable architectural interiors. Integrated spaces will allow firms to evolve their technology without costly, disruptive renovations.

Case for Support: Attract and Retain Talent

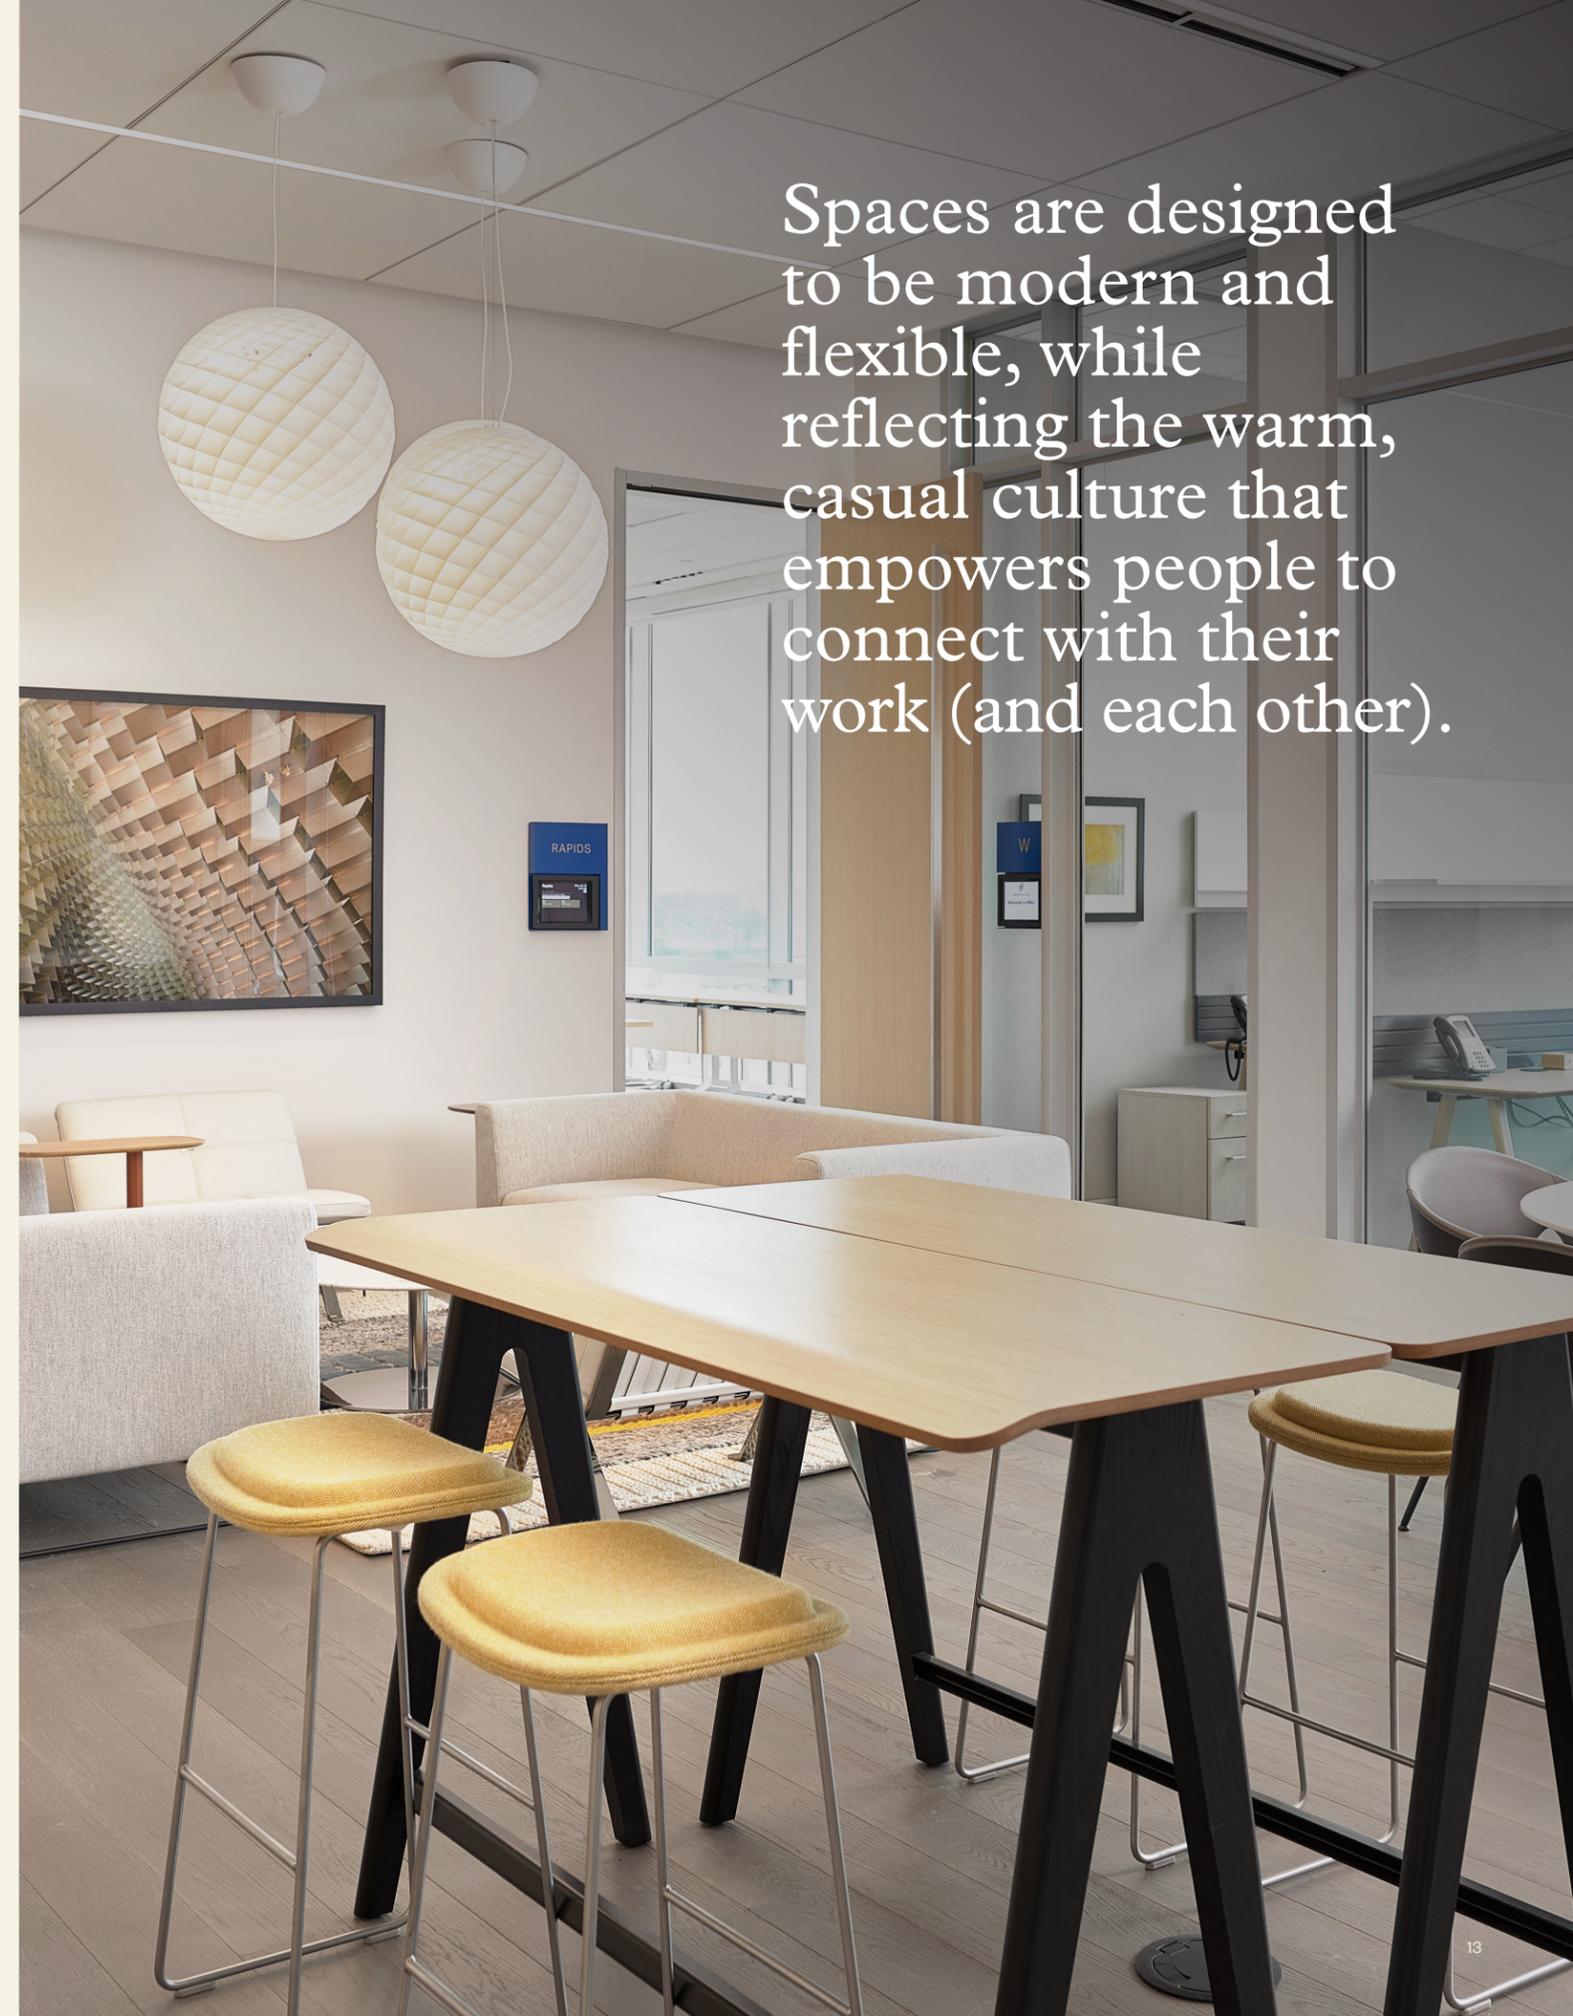

Hybrid work, global talent sourcing, and the next generation of lawyers are changing firm culture. Younger professionals prioritize purpose, balance, and growth opportunities over prestige. Because legal professionals log long hours with demanding workloads, they benefit from attention to well-being, including considerations for ergonomic furniture for changing postures throughout the day and access to natural light to reduce stress. Firms that invest in the well-being of people and professional growth will attract and retain the best talent.

CLIENT SPACE

Warner Norcross + Judd

Warner Norcross + Judd has more than 230 attorneys in eight locations throughout Michigan. The firm's dynamic space reflects a refreshed sense of community with efficiencies that support the modern ways people in law offices work and socialize. Remaining true to its motto: "Fun, Pride, & Profit...in that order," the designed environment reflects the firm's culture in spaces where people can connect with each other and the outdoors.

Spaces are designed to be modern and flexible, while reflecting the warm, casual culture that empowers people to connect with their work (and each other).

Financial Services

Spaces That Support Market Speed

Clients are no longer satisfied with stagnant product offerings—they expect personalized, proactive guidance. Delivering advice that feels human, not transactional, is rooted in a variety of spaces designed to enable the work. Evaluating workflow and the right ratio of public, private, and ancillary spaces will help people more easily toggle between in-person and virtual tasks.

Investing in Agility and Flexibility

Tailoring portfolios, credit decisions, and financial advice in real time means giving employees access to a variety of dedicated spaces that can flex on demand. Designing solutions that support resilience of space take into consideration growth, technology updates, and connecting with clients. Designing spaces that adapt to change is a sound return on investment for financial services.

Safeguarding Identity

The identity of a financial services firm is evident in internal and external touchpoints—from signage to marketing, lobbies to conference rooms, and beyond. When the experience matches the environment, the perception is solidified and trust is earned. How people feel, think, connect, and collaborate is a reflection and reinforcement of well-designed spaces.

Leveraging Human Assets

Future-ready institutions are empowering multi-skilled teams who can navigate data, digital tools, and human connections. The winning formula is a workforce that combines analytical precision with empathetic working relationships. Designing an environment that supports the performance and well-being of people is an asset worthy of investment.

Ash Brokerage

Ash Brokerage is the largest independently owned firm of its kind. The family-owned company has a legacy of working with financial professionals to serve clients' needs. Growth of the firm led to two separate facilities, creating a division of staff that didn't mirror the CEO's vision for culture. After building the new headquarters where all employees were located in one space, satisfaction soared, with team members appreciating more personal control over space and a more effective, flexible work environment.

Every employee's workstation is within 50 feet of a window—putting well-being front and center.

Consulting

Strategic and Sustainable Advisors

Consulting firms continue to focus on executing strategic and sustainable change for clients. The future lies in outcomes: measurable impacts, faster cycles, and practical transformation. The traditional consultant-client hierarchy is giving way to collaboration through cross-functional teams that blend external expertise with internal know-how. With niche expertise as a differentiator, designed environments reinforce competitive advantage.

Managing Resources

Data is the new currency of credibility. Leading firms are embedding artificial intelligence, predictive analytics, and automation into every engagement—using real-time insights to drive smarter strategies, improve operations, and quantify value creation. While technology scales consulting insights, human connection enables trust. People thrive when resources and thoughtful space design intersect.

In the Zone

Boutique firms and specialized practices are gaining ground by offering depth of sector expertise and agility to pivot when scope and demands change. Successful consultants are partners who can flex internal teams, resources, and adapt solutions—from strategic planning to tactical implementation. Multi-use zones provide flexibility and performance over costly construction.

Drawing People In

Consulting firms are catalysts—blending human insights with technology and creativity to help organizations move faster, smarter, and with purpose. How a firm is perceived in the market continues to be shaped by everything that creates value, including history, service, reputation, and the experiences of people within the space. Sound facilities strategies and space planning are fundamental to engagement.

EisnerAmper

Spaces prioritize employee well-being, abundant natural light, and a variety of settings to give people choice and control over where to do their best work.

EisnerAmper's offices have kept pace with the evolution of offerings from traditional accounting to a consulting firm. The San Francisco location is a showcase for balancing a variety of environments that support the range of services offered and the ways people work. Employees have access to a mix of open and dedicated spaces to foster focused individual tasks and team collaboration. From engaging workspaces to the tech lounge of amenities, employee well-being is intentionally designed into every touchpoint.

Finding Balance

Experienced in its entirety, the design of a firm should make people feel confident in its acumen and culture. From architectural interiors that define a flexible floorplate to ergonomic options that support well-being, attention to furnishings and the overall experience helps firms reach their potential by keeping pace with industry evolution and client expectations.

Haworth provides solutions to furnish the entire firm inside and out, advancing your firm's image, while meeting the needs of employees, clients, partners, and the community.

Private Office

Elevated Professional Spaces
Private offices within a firm are a reflection of leadership and expertise. From the walls to lighting, furniture to finishes, a cohesive environment supports both focused work and confidential conversations. Contemporary design choices translate professionalism into sophistication—meeting the elevated expectations of clients.

Modern Productivity
Moveable glass walls come together to create well-defined private enclosures while allowing natural light to flow. An elegant L-shaped workstation paired with sleek leather seating delivers a modern aesthetic that supports both productivity and presence.

Professional and Personal
Generous workspaces seamlessly transition from individual use to small meetings, while a mix of open and concealed storage accommodates reference materials and curated displays that reflect personal style and professional credibility.

Timeless materials anchor the space with warmth and gravitas. Furniture that reads as built-in conveys stability, while modular components allow for easy reconfiguration—ensuring a future-ready investment for promotion and growth.

Conference

Comfort Meets Class

Client-facing conference rooms balance ease with intention. Welcoming aesthetics set the tone, while thoughtful planning ensures privacy. Ergonomic task chairs support comfort through extended meetings, complemented by guest seating, ambient lighting, and biophilic elements that elevate the overall experience.

Trust and Transparency

Glass walls signal transparency and approachability. Material selection that maintains visual openness while preserving acoustical privacy reinforces trust without distraction. Abundant daylight supports well-being and energizes both in-person collaboration and virtual engagement.

Versatile Performance

Seamless connectivity is essential to high-performing conference spaces. Integrated, intuitive technology supports every agenda, from presentations to hybrid meetings. A curated blend of task and lounge seating allows occupants to shift posture and stay engaged without leaving the room.

Discovery Driven Spaces

Intentionally zoned environments support multiple modes of collaboration. Open areas encourage idea-sharing and digital presentation, while enclosed rooms provide the focus required for structured meetings, strategic discussions, and discovery sessions.

Beautiful, highly functional conference rooms are defined by thoughtful details. Seating with casters moves effortlessly within the room—or beyond it—adapting quickly to changing group sizes and meeting styles. Integrated power at the conference table and access to the media wall keep technology seamless and attention focused on the conversation and decisions at hand.

Administrative

Elevated First Impressions

Administrative areas often serve as the first point of contact, shaping the brand experience for both visitors and staff. Consider orienting furniture to welcome guests and clients while preserving clear sightlines to conference room occupancy. Designed spaces are approachable, organized, and responsive—supporting both hospitality and daily operations.

Focused Work Spaces

As storage needs shift from analog to digital, firms require solutions that balance administrative functionality with personal organization. Frequently used items are kept within easy reach, while visual clutter is discreetly concealed behind closed storage. Clear work-surfaces support focused, technology-driven work, complemented by glass privacy screens that provide enclosure without sacrificing transparency or access to natural light.

Flexible Ecosystems

Varied worksurfaces and seating offer flexibility to support teams by encouraging collaboration or providing areas for heads-down productivity.

A height-adjustable desk in a rich wood finish elevates both the aesthetic and functional experience of the workspace. Designed to support the dynamic demands of administrative roles, the sit-to-stand functionality encourages regular movement throughout the day, promoting improved posture, reduced fatigue, and sustained focus.
