Case Study

A software brand with a 30-year heritage, Quest saw a change of ownership following its spin off from Dell in November 2016. Now expanding its IT and Cloud Management portfolio solutions as a separate entity, the company wanted a fresh, consistent look across all its global offices, punctuated by the local flavour of each location.

Haworth brought together a range of efficient workspace solutions to meet the business' vision, delivering the furniture and tools to support its employees and community of fiercely loyal customers and partners. In Quest's Singapore office, this included HAT Element desks across a 39K square foot space to accommodate 150 sales, managerial and regional executive professionals.

Furniture elements from the friendly, sustainable and smart Very family – Very task and side chairs and side stools – created a uniform look in keeping with Quest’s unique brand identity while enhancing collaboration between employees and clients. Haworth also installed Gong tables and the colourful, playful shapes and unexpected proportions of the SE04 Lounge for public areas, lounges, huddle spaces, and meeting places.

Other elements included Haworth M Series for a unified aesthetic and appeal; inviting and approachable Chick Pouf lounge chairs in break out areas, and flexible AP Planes to foster brainstorming and ideas. Now Quest offices from Austin, Texas to Bangalore, India sport a unified, consistent look that instantly communicates volumes about their innovative business philosophy.

"The final handover went smoothly," said CBRE. "Haworth worked hard to match Quest's colour palette – including revising colour combinations to take into account our brand's tricky orange shade within a single day. The team was strongly committed to the project's overall success and was highly responsive – including lightning fast responses from the team in the wee hours! On a whole, it was a positive experience and we genuinely appreciate all Haworth's assistance."
